Driving Critical Minerals Security

Join industry experts for a deep dive into the economic, geopolitical, technological, environmental, and social considerations of securing critical minerals and apply findings to a range of industries and policy challenges. Through dynamic sessions, interactive seminars, and a tabletop exercise, investigate the various risks facing U.S. critical minerals security for the foreseeable future.

Flashpoints in Focus: Venezuela After Maduro

The end of Maduro's rule has opened a high-stakes and unpredictable chapter for Venezuela. This course analyzes post-Maduro trajectories, providing insights into how early transition decisions are likely to shape security dynamics, energy markets, and U.S. regional strategy.

Briefing for Impact: The AI Landscape

Artificial intelligence is reshaping geopolitical competition, regulatory debates, and the information environment. In this half-day program, participants will first examine the strategic implications of AI before putting those insights to work in a focused oral briefing practicum that mirrors the demands of real-world decisionmaking.

Decoding D.C.: Policy, Power, and People

Learn the ins and outs of Washington's unique political landscape from D.C. insiders and experienced policy practitioners. Understand how formal institutions and informal networks interact to advance policy interests. Sharpen the skills you need to manage crises, assess breaking developments, and engage both government and nongovernment actors.

Global Foresight: Preparing for Future Trends

Explore the critical megatrends that will shape the world over the next 30 years and unpack important policy issues and trends alongside top CSIS scholars and foresight practitioners. Develop strategic foresight tools—from identifying drivers of change to building future worlds—and learn to anticipate external challenges.

Meeting China's Military Challenge

Engage with today's most pressing defense challenges in this two-day course about the implications of China's military rise and its impact on U.S. national security. Expert-led seminars and an immersive wargame will illuminate the consequences of a U.S.-China conflict and the effectiveness of U.S. force structure and strategy.

Inside DOD's FY 2027 Budget

Gain access to expert analysis on major changes in the U.S. FY 2027 defense budget request and the Trump administration's national defense strategy. Dive deep into how these changes will affect the defense enterprise and how to find the data that's most important for your organization.

All About the Base: Acquisition Crash Course

The Washington, D.C. defense policy community is a robust ecosystem with frequent new entrants at every level, but the acquisition process can be mystifying without the proper training resources. Join the CSIS Center for the Industrial Base to break down the full acquisition process, including requirements, funding, and contracting for systems.
