

Center for Strategic and International Studies

Congressional Forum on Islam

Presents:

“The Struggle for the Soul of Islam”

With

Muqtedar Khan

Assistant Professor, University of Delaware

The aftermath of September 11 exposed a battle between moderate, traditionalist and radical Muslim forces to define Islam. In the West, radicals' voices often appear to be the strongest. Prof. Muqtedar Khan, a leading voice of moderate Islam, will analyze this debate and discuss Muslim strategies for combating extremism.

Moderated by

Jon B. Alterman

Director, CSIS Middle East Program

Monday, October 16, 2006

12:00 p.m. – 1:30 p.m.

188 Senate Russell Office Building

Lunch will be provided

Please RSVP to Eric Ham at (202) 775-3186 or eham@csis.org

Muqtedar Khan has been a leading advocate for Muslim reform since 9/11. He is the author of numerous articles and several books including, American Muslims: Bridging Faith and Freedom (Amana 2002) and Jihad for Jerusalem: Identity and Strategy in International Relations (Praeger, 2004). Dr. Khan holds a Ph.D. from Georgetown University and an MBA from Bombay University, and he is a non-resident fellow at the Brookings Institution.

Jon B. Alterman is director of the CSIS Middle East Program.

The Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) is a nonprofit, bipartisan public policy organization established in 1962 to provide strategic insights and practical policy solutions to decision-makers concerned with global security and international prosperity.