

INVITATION

Center for Strategic and International Studies ■ Washington, D.C.

Dear colleague:

The Washington Quarterly invites you to celebrate the beginning of our 30th year, and kick off the holiday season in substantive style with a roundtable discussion and cocktail reception on Wednesday, November 29, 4-6 p.m.

This event will unveil the journal's new look and editorial board and include an in-depth discussion on Iran, our feature topic in the Winter 2006-07 issue.

From 4 to 5 p.m., "Inside Iran: What Next?" will discuss a range of interrelated issues including Iranian politics, its foreign policy, the nuclear program, and U.S. policy as UN Security Council negotiations continue, amidst widespread expectations that the Iraq Study Group will recommend dialogue with Iran, and as a new Secretary of Defense prepares to take office. Panelists include:

- Karim Sadjadpour, Iran Analyst, International Crisis Group and author of the forthcoming article "How Relevant is the Iranian Street?"
- Daniel Byman, Director, Security Studies Program, Georgetown University, and new TWQ editorial board member
- Jon Alterman, Director and Senior Fellow, CSIS Middle East Program
- Robert Einhorn, Senior Adviser, CSIS International Security Program

The discussion will be followed by a cocktail reception from 5 to 6 p.m. accompanying the release of the new-look issue. The event will take place in the B-1 conference level of our offices at 1800 K Street, N.W.

Our space for this event is limited, so please RSVP if you plan on attending. To confirm your presence, please contact Amanda Kozlowski at The Washington Quarterly by email at akozlowski@csis.org by Tuesday, November 21. This invitation is transferable upon request. We hope to see you there.
