

A Combatant Commander's Perspective on Security in the Asia-Pacific

Moderator and Panelist Biographies

Michael Green (Moderator) is a senior adviser and holds the Japan Chair at CSIS, as well as being an associate professor of international relations at Georgetown University. He served as special assistant to the president for national security affairs and senior director for Asian affairs at the National Security Council (NSC) from January 2004 to December 2005. He joined the NSC in April 2001 as director of Asian affairs with responsibility for Japan, Korea, and Australia/New Zealand. From 1997 to 2000, he was senior fellow for Asian security at the Council on Foreign Relations, where he directed the Independent Task Force on Korea and study groups on Japan and security policy in Asia. He served as senior adviser in the Office of Asian and Pacific Affairs at the Department of Defense in 1997 and as consultant to the same office until 2000. From 1995 to 1997, he was a research staff member at the Institute for Defense Analyses, and from 1994 to 1995, he was an assistant professor of Asian studies at the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), where he remained a professorial lecturer until 2001. Green speaks fluent Japanese and spent over five years in Japan working as a staff member of the National Diet, as a journalist for Japanese and American newspapers, and as a consultant for U.S. business. He graduated from Kenyon College with highest honors in history in 1983 and received his M.A. from Johns Hopkins SAIS in 1987 and his Ph.D. in 1994. He also did graduate work at Tokyo University as a Fulbright fellow and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a research associate of the MIT-Japan Program. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, The International Institute for Strategic Studies, and the Aspen Strategy Group and is vice chair of the congressionally mandated Japan-U.S. Friendship Commission. He serves on the advisory boards of the Center for a New American Security and Australian American Leadership Dialogue, and is a member of the editorial board of The Washington Quarterly.

Since April, 1997, Frank Jannuzi (Panelist) has served as the Senior East Asia Adviser for the Democratic staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Mr. Jannuzi reports to Senator John Kerry (D-Massachusetts), the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, advising him on policy options, drafting legislation authorizing U.S. diplomatic operations, security assistance, and foreign aid, and representing Senator Kerry in discussions with the American public as well as with foreign government officials and the media. From 1989-1997, Mr. Jannuzi worked as the East Asia regional political-military analyst for the Bureau of Intelligence and Research (INR), U.S. Department of State. His portfolio included a variety of regional security issues, including the Korean Peninsula, China's defense modernization, and territorial disputes in the South China Sea and Kuril Islands. Mr. Jannuzi was the founding editor-in-chief of Peacekeeping Perspectives, the State Department's journal on multilateral peacekeeping and humanitarian operations. From August 2006 until September 2007, Mr. Jannuzi lived in Japan with his wife and family under the auspices of the Hitachi International Affairs Fellowship of the Council on Foreign Relations. While in Tokyo, Mr. Jannuzi joined the faculty of Keio University as a Visiting Professor in the Law Faculty, and also served as a visiting research fellow at the Institute of International Policy Studies. Mr. Jannuzi holds a B.A. in history from Yale University and a M.P.P. with a concentration in international affairs and security from the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. Mr. Jannuzi lives in Baltimore, Maryland, with his wife, Dr. Jennifer Martin, and their daughters Zoe and Camille.

James Kitfield (Panelist) is presently the national security and foreign affairs correspondent for National Journal magazine, an independent and non-partisan newsweekly on politics and government published by Atlantic Media Company. He has written on defense, national security and foreign policy issues from Washington, D.C. for over two decades.

In 2009, Kitfield was awarded the Gerald R. Ford Prize for Distinguished Reporting on National Defense for his reporting the previous year, which the judges lauded for its "extraordinary" quality and breadth, "providing a tour d'horizon of the critical issues of our times – from the counter-insurgency in Afghanistan to the strategic significance of Pakistan to breakout from the nuclear non-proliferation regime to the dangers of stumbling into a confrontation with Russia...Mr. Kitfield, in the view of the judges, hit a home run with each submission...and the judges would like to commend [him] for a body of work that was consistently strong, penetratingly relevant, and written to help Americans understand the intricacies of the global risks and realities the nation now faces." As the recipient of the Gerald R. Ford Defense Award in both 1995 and 1990, Kitfield is the only multiple winner in the award's 22-year history.

Both in 2008 and 2004 the Military Reporters and Editors Association awarded Kitfield its first place prize in excellence in overseas reporting for his first-hand coverage of the Iraq war, which also merited honorable mention in the 2008 Edgar A. Poe Award for reporting on issues of national importance, given each year by the White House Correspondents Association. Kitfield also received the 2002 Stewart Alsop Media Excellence Award, sponsored by the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, for his coverage of events following the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Each year the Alsop Award recognizes a journalist who has made

“an exceptional contribution to balanced and informed coverage on national security and intelligence-related issues.”

Kitfield also received the 2000 Edwin Hood Award for Diplomatic Correspondence given annually by the National Press Club to recognize excellence in reporting on diplomatic and foreign policy issues. Citing Kitfield’s insightful writing on trans-Atlantic issues, the German Marshall Fund awarded him its Peter R. Weitz Award for Excellence in Reporting on European Affairs in 2000. In 1987, Kitfield won the Jesse H. Neal Award for Excellence in Reporting from the Association of Business Publishers for an article on the vulnerability of the Navy’s surface warships that preceded the tragic attack on the USS Stark by an Iraqi aircraft.

Mr. Kitfield is the author of the book “War & Destiny,” (How the Bush Revolution in Foreign and Military Affairs Redefined American Power), published by Potomac Books in 2005. Gen. Wesley Clark (ret.) called the book “masterful” and “an incredibly insightful portrayal of war, diplomacy, national security policy-making, and the struggle for American success in Iraq,” while Gen. Barry McCaffrey (ret.) lauded it as a “brilliant narrative that powerfully chronicles how the war in Iraq has brought us to a crossroads.” Mr. Kitfield is also author of “Prodigal Soldiers,” (How the Generation of Officers Born of Vietnam Revolutionized the American Style of War), published by Simon & Schuster in 1995. The Chicago Tribune called the book “A major work of U.S. military history,” and the Wall Street Journal referred to it as “One of the most illuminating military books in recent years...”

Mr. Kitfield’s articles have appeared in The National Interest, National Journal, Omni, Newsday, Los Angeles Magazine, Army Times, Air Force Magazine, The Stars & Stripes, Off Duty, and other publications. Kitfield is a 1978 magna cum laude graduate of the University of Georgia’s Henry Grady School of Journalism.

Randy Schriver (Panelist) is one of five founding partners of Armitage International LLC, a consulting firm that specializes in international business development and strategies. Armitage International incorporated in March 2005. He is also CEO and President of the Project 2049 Institute, a non-profit research organization dedicated to the study of security trend lines in Asia. He is also a Senior Associate at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Immediately prior to his return to the private sector, he served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs responsible for the PRC, Taiwan, Mongolia, Hong Kong, Australia, New Zealand, and the Pacific Islands. Prior to joining the Asia Bureau, he served for two years as Chief of Staff and Senior Policy Advisor to Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage. He joined the Department of State in March 2001 upon the swearing in of Deputy Secretary Armitage.

Prior to his work at the State Department, he served for four years in the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) as a civil servant. As Senior Country Director for the PRC, Taiwan, and Mongolia in OSD from 1997 to 1998, he was the senior official responsible for the day-to-day management of U.S. bilateral relations with the People's Liberation Army, and the bilateral security & military relationships with Taiwan. Other OSD assignments included Assistant Country Director for the PRC, Taiwan, and Mongolia (1995-97), the Office of Counter Proliferation Policy (1995), and the Commission on Roles and Missions of the Armed Forces (1994). He joined OSD as a Presidential Management Fellow.

Prior to his civilian service, he served as an active duty Navy Intelligence Officer for nearly three years (1989-91). His operational assignments were with Patrol Squadron Four (VP-4), and Special Air Reconnaissance Squadron Three (VQ-3). During his stint with VP-4 he completed a deployment in theater for service in Operation Desert Shield/Desert Storm. After active duty, he served in the Navy Reserves for nine years (1991-2000). In his capacity as a reserve officer he completed active duty for training assignments as a Special Assistant to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (1999), and as an attaché at the U.S. Embassy Beijing (1997) and U.S. Embassy Ulaanbaatar (1996).

His political experience includes service as a foreign policy advisor on the McCain for President Campaign (2008), on the Bush-Cheney Defense Transition Team (2000-01), and work on the 2000 Bush-Cheney campaign as a member of the Asia Policy Team. Previously he served in both the Washington and district offices of Representative Denny Smith (R-OR) where he worked on defense and military issues (1987).

Mr. Schriver has won numerous military and civilian awards from the U.S. government, and was presented with the Order of the Propitious Clouds by the President of Taiwan for service while at the State Department promoting U.S.-Taiwan relations.

He hails from the state of Oregon. He holds a master degree in public policy from Harvard University (1994), and received a B.A. in history from Williams College (1989). He was a four-year varsity college tennis player, and has completed four triathlons. He teaches a foreign policy course for Stanford University's Stanford-in-Washington program. He serves on the Board of Advisors of the Center for a New American Security.
