

The Civil Side of Counterterrorism

A Presentation to the 7th Xiangshan Forum

October 12, 2016

Introduction

Seven minutes is a very short time in which to make points about new approaches to counterterrorism. Accordingly, I'm going to rush through several key sets of data, and leave you with a presentation that includes both some back up sides and a bibliography that provides a full explanation of each point I raise.

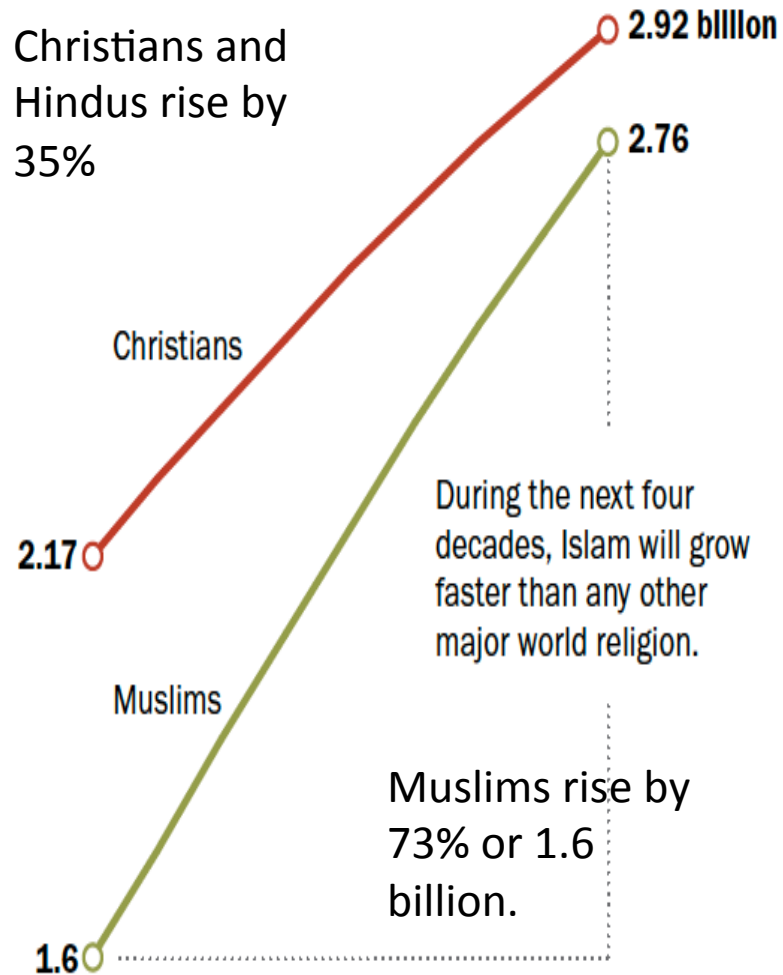

The key points I want make can be summarized as follows:

- Just as development cannot occur without stability and security, stability and security cannot be achieved without development. Counterterrorism must look beyond simply fighting terrorism and insurgency, and address the underlying causes of instability and violence.
- Change requires time, and an effective strategy for counterterrorism must look at time periods of a decade or more, and future trends. Focusing on the current threat alone is a certain recipe for failure.
- One key trend is the rapid growth of Islam throughout much of the world, and the need for partnership with the Islamic world and moderate, largely Islamic states. Demonizing all of Islam over the action of a small extremist minority is an equally certain recipe for failure.
- Both the West and the East have adopted the wrong approaches to the deeper upheavals within the Islamic world. As the Arab Development Reports warned as early as 2002, These upheavals are the product of failed secularism and governance, failed development, failed governance, corruption, and massive population pressure. The Western view that "Arab spring" could bring effective stability and development when every such upheaval lacked moderate leaders a that could govern, had political experience, and could move towards development was a triumph of optimism over experience. The The East focus on "color revolutions" and conspiracy theories has been an exercise in equally absurd political opportunism.

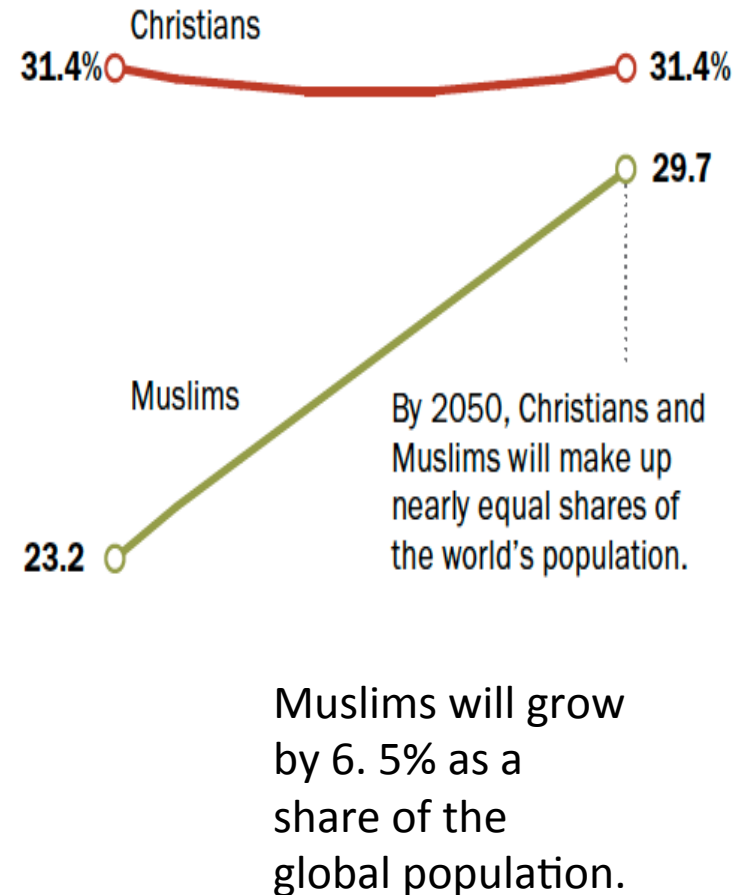

I can only rush through a few key indicators in the time I have available, but each illustrates the scale of the problems involved, and the need to look beyond the threat of the moment, parochial attitudes towards Islam, and focus on cooperation between the West, the East, and the Islamic world.

The primary growth is outside the MENA region:

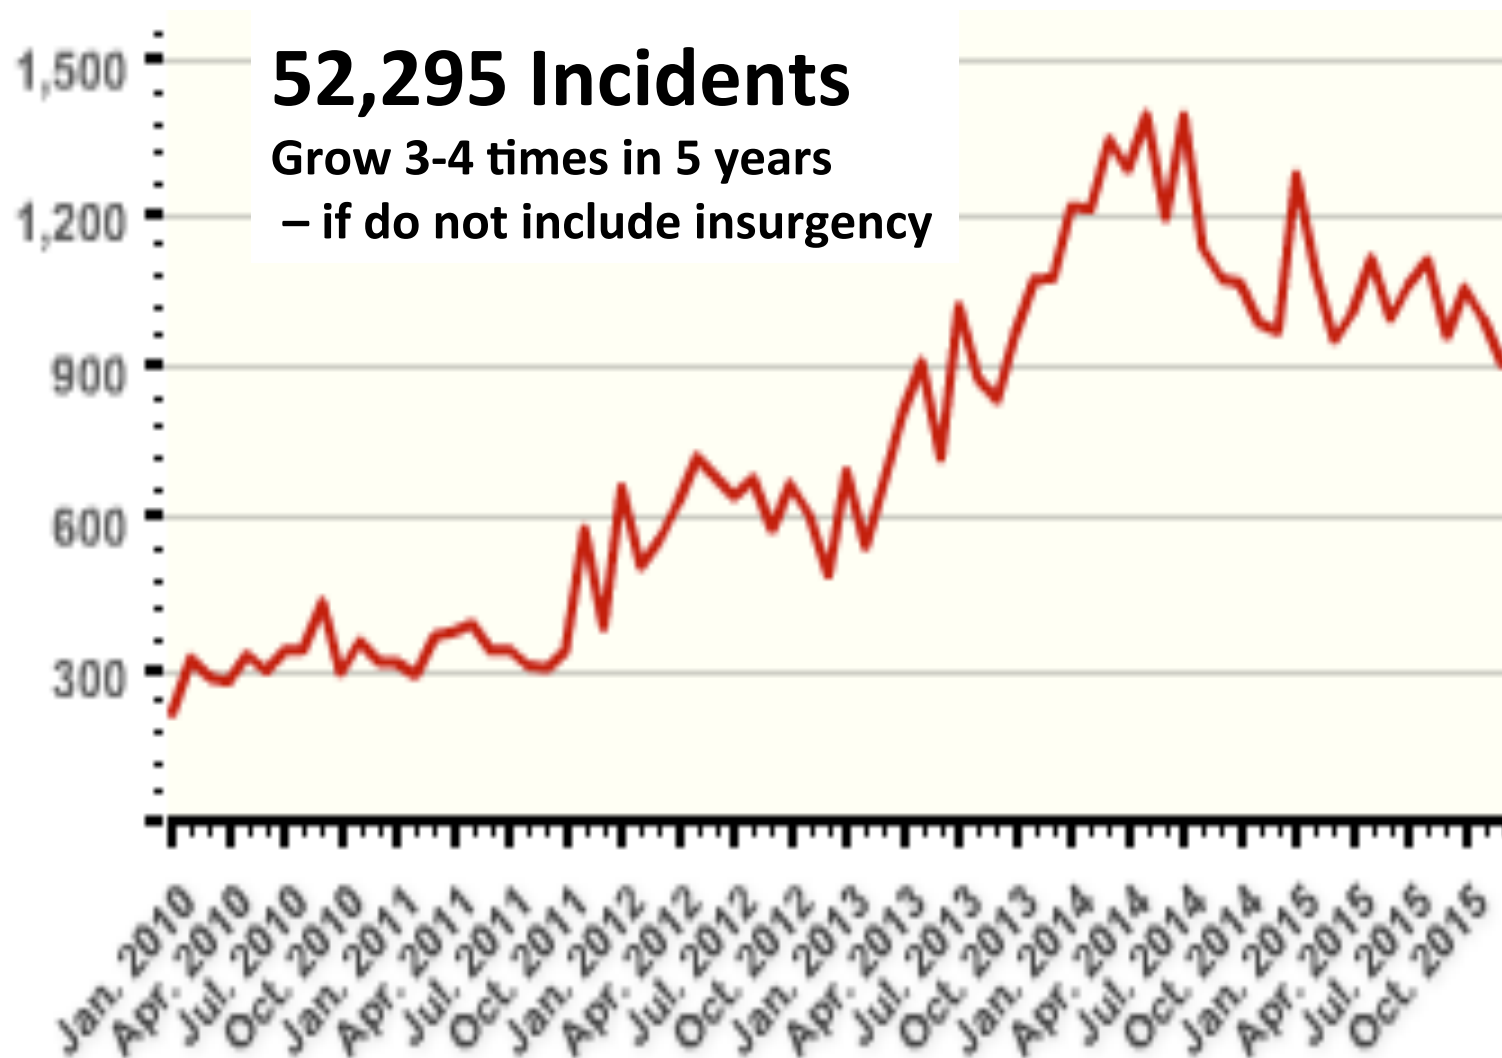

- +5.2% of population in Asia
- +5.6% in Sub-Saharan Africa
- +4.3% in Europe

May have the same impact globally as the emergence of China

The Civil Side: Governance

Failed governance leads to violence and extremism, or civil conflict. Authoritarianism and repression do not suppress them, simply bottle them up until they explode.

The Civil Side: Corruption

Corruption breeds anger and extremism: See Syria, Yemen, Libya, Iraq and Afghanistan

Public Perceptions of the Importance of Sharia

% of Muslims who favor making sharia the official law in their country

Recent surveys show (that most people in several countries with significant Muslim populations have an unfavorable view of ISIS, including virtually all respondents in Lebanon and 94% in Jordan.

Relatively small shares say they see ISIS favorably. In some countries, considerable portions of the population do not offer an opinion about ISIS, including a majority (62%) of Pakistanis.

Favorable views of ISIS are somewhat higher in Nigeria (14%) than most other nations. Among Nigerian Muslims, 20% say they see ISIS favorably (compared with 7% of Nigerian Christians). The Nigerian militant group Boko Haram, which has been conducting a terrorist campaign in the country for years, has sworn allegiance to ISIS.

More generally, Muslims mostly say that suicide bombings and other forms of violence against civilians in the name of Islam are rarely or never justified, including 92% in Indonesia and 91% in Iraq. In the United States, a 2011 survey found that 86% of Muslims ...say that such tactics are rarely or never justified. An additional 7% say suicide bombings are sometimes justified and 1% say they are often justified in these circumstances.

In a few countries, a quarter or more of Muslims say that these acts of violence are at least sometimes justified, including 40% in the Palestinian territories, 39% in Afghanistan, 29% in Egypt and 26% in Bangladesh.

In many cases, people in countries with large Muslim populations are as concerned as Western nations...about the threat of Islamic extremism, and have become increasingly concerned in recent years. About two-thirds of people in Nigeria (68%) and Lebanon (67%) said earlier this year they are very concerned about Islamic extremism in their country, both up significantly since 2013.
